

Torah Reflections on Parashat Beha'aloteha

Numbers 8:1 - 12:16

16 Sivan 5770

May 29, 2010

"El na refah na lah... Please God heal her." These could be the words of any one of us faced with the illness of someone we love. When we witness the fragility of life, when we realize that those close to us are only mortal, our hearts cry out for help. Often at such a moment, as our minds begin to race with thoughts of the future, we find ourselves at a loss for words. Past arguments and disagreements that once seemed irreconcilable slip away as we are reminded of what is most important. The problems of the past may re-emerge, but in that first moment of understanding, they are eclipsed by a much larger truth—the power of our love and connection.

Moses uses these five words to call upon God to heal Miriam. Only moments earlier (in Numbers, chapter 12) she and Aaron had been criticizing Moses and questioning his leadership. Suddenly she is struck with a disfiguring skin disease, their fighting quickly stops, and Moses prays on his sister's behalf.

As the Israelites travel through the wilderness, they constantly challenge Moses' authority and ability. At the end of this week's parsha, criticism of Moses comes from an unexpected source – Miriam and Aaron. They ask: "Is it only through Moses that God speaks? Has God not also spoken through us?" God hears their accusations and appears enraged. They are chastised for their impudence and God affirms Moses' unique status as a prophet and leader. Miriam is punished.

The text leaves many questions unanswered. What motivated Miriam and Aaron to criticize their brother? Why was Miriam punished and not Aaron? What exactly was the illness that afflicted Miriam? Most commentators attempt to determine the reasons behind the siblings' behavior and God's response to it.

These are the same questions that arise out of our own experience of illness. We ask: Why is this happening? Why is God punishing me? What could I have done differently to prevent this from happening? There are no easy answers to these questions and each of us must try to make our own meaning out of the suffering we encounter.

Illness, tragedy and loss are difficult teachers. They shatter our lives and the world no longer seems to make sense. As we begin to rebuild, we find our perspective changed. We take stock of what is most important to us. The faces of friends and family appear to us more clearly. We recall moments of our lives with both pride and regret. We are reminded of what is most dear to us and we learn to treasure each moment more carefully.

“El na refah na lah... God, please heal her.” A brief, almost wordless cry, of a brother for his sister... a child for her parents... a spouse for his beloved. The painful words and deeds of the past fade away in the face of an illness and the essential aspects of our lives become more apparent. In these moments of pain, may we find strength to let go of past wounds, to recall the blessings in our lives, and to treasure the people that we love.

© Bay Area Jewish Healing Center, Rabbi Elisa Goldberg

This Torah Reflection was written by Rabbi Elisa Goldberg, Director of the Joan Grossman Center for Chaplaincy and Healing of Jewish Family and Children's Service of Greater Philadelphia.. It is brought to you by the Bay Area Jewish Healing Center (a beneficiary of the Jewish Community Federation of San Francisco, the Peninsula, Marin and Sonoma Counties), an affiliate of the Institute on Aging.

3330 Geary Boulevard, 3rd Floor West, San Francisco, CA 94118 • (415) 750-4197 • www.jewishhealingcenter.org